

Attachment 12.1: Study Participant Bill of Rights

Research Volunteer's Rights

<http://www.creighton.edu/researchcompliance/researchparticipantresources/index.php>

If you are asked to consent to be a subject in a research study, you have the right to:

- Learn about the nature and the purpose of the study, experiment, or clinical trial;
- Receive an explanation of the procedures, and of any drug or device that may be used;
- Learn about any benefits you might expect from the study;
- Receive a description of any discomforts and risks that you may experience from the study;
- Learn about the risks and benefits of any other available procedures, drugs, or devices that may be helpful to you;
- Learn what medical treatment will be made available to you if you should be injured as a result of the study;
- Decide to consent or not to consent to a study without feeling force, obligation, pressure, or coercion;
- Receive a copy of the signed and dated consent form;
- Quit the study at any time; your decision may not be used as an excuse to hold back necessary medical treatment; and
- Ask any questions about the study or the procedures involved.
